On Friday, May 24, the Soviet Union announced that it was planning to send a large number of its best athletes to the 1960 Summer Olympics in Rome, Italy. The Soviet Union has a long history of success in the Olympics, and this time it is expected to be no exception.

1 Vladimir Ismagulov

Vladimir Ismagulov, a Soviet athlete, is expected to be one of the top performers at the 1960 Summer Olympics in Rome. He is a member of the Soviet national team and has won several international competitions. Ismagulov is a strong and fast runner, and he is expected to compete in the 100-meter and 200-meter sprints.

WASHINGTON STAR 5 April 1960 U.S. Exports to Soviets to Plummet

Associated Press

U.S. exports to the Soviet Union in 1959 will drop from an expected $4.5 billion to $1.5 billion because of trade restrictions imposed by President Carter after the Russians invaded Afghanistan, the government has predicted.

The severe decline will occur mainly in the export of grain, pharmaceuticals and certain high technology products, particularly computers, the Commerce Department reported yesterday.

Imports from the Soviet Union, however, should not be affected much by events since less than 4 percent of the restrictions in Afghanistan for Soviet exports in Afghanistan, department officials said.

In fact, imports could grow slightly, although less than anticipated earlier, to about $1 billion.

The predictions were made in the April edition of the department's Journal, Business America. Restrictions on agricultural exports to the Soviets will limit exports in the area to about $1.1 billion in 1960 compared with anticipated sales of about $1.9 billion, department officials said.

U.S. exports of high technology products will be reduced by about $100 million to $80 million.

An embargo of pharmaceuticals, meanwhile, should cut sales to about $80 million this year. Air travel on scheduled lines will drop.

In addition, the ban on Olympic-related exports and other trade-related exports with the Russian Games will cut off an additional $80 million in trade — including money that would have come from travel cost rights.

U.S. imports from the Soviet Union this year are expected to consist mainly of non-monetary gold, cotton and wool. Last year, this amounted to $200 million of a total $273 million in Soviet imports.

Imports of minerals will probably reach $100 million this year, compared with $56 million in 1959, department officials said. Soviet deliveries are expected to rise under a trade agreement in which the United States exports phosphorus.

Since the invasion, Carter has set in motion a grain embargo, a detailed review of export licensing policy toward the Soviet Union, a temporary halt in pharmaceutical exports and a embargo of Olympic-related goods.

Romania a key to East-West talks despite rumblings from Moscow

It is widely expected that the Romanian Government will announce a policy of neutrality in the near future. This move is seen as a key to East-West talks, despite rumblings from Moscow. The Romanian Government has been accused of being a puppet of the West, but it is now seen as a key to East-West talks.
